Buyer's Consolidation.

Buyer's consolidation shipment (also simply known as freight consolidation) is a method of shipping cargo you may consider when shipping two or more shipments from different suppliers in the same country. To use shipping terminology, it will involve consolidating two or more LCL (Less than Container Load) shipments into one FCL (Full Container Load) shipment. Organizing LCL shipments is relatively easy but sending multiple LCL shipments to the same destination can be unnecessarily costly.

Ocean Consolidation.

Ocean Consolidation; a cost-effective shipping solution where multiple smaller shipments from different shippers are combined into a single container.

This service allows businesses to benefit from the economies of full-container shipping without needing to fill an entire container themselves. Ideal for smaller volumes, ocean consolidation ensures optimized space utilization, reduced freight costs, and efficient transit—making it an excellent choice for importers seeking flexibility, reliability, and value in their global supply chain.
